Mind Reading.

Mr. J. Randall Brown, a mind reader, gave an exhibition of his powers in Richmond, last Mouday night.

The Richmond Enquirer, says: He was favored with a large audience, composed of many of the best citizens-ladies and gentlemen-of bow, remarked that as he supposed there was | mond. some curiosity to know something about his career, he would give a brief biography of himself. He was born and raised in Iowa, and until four years ago had pursued a mechanical calling, but having discovered his power as a mind-reader he had given illustrations of it to bis friends until calls became so fr quent he determined to devote himself to it for compen sation. "I called it," said he, "mind-reading, because the professors and other learned men who tested my powers told me it was that. I am convinced, but do not ask you to believe, that it is done by the power of spiritual influences," &c." "You may attribute these manifestations to whatever cause your judgment may

By Mr. Brown's request a committee of wellknown gentlemen-among whom were Mr. B. F. Lecch, of R ckbridge; Judge E. C. Misor, Mr. Isaac Davenport, Colonel W. C. Carrington and Mr. Geo. Watt, sr., -were nominated by the audience and went upon the stage to detect any trick or collusion that might be attempted in connection with any person behind the scenes.

The committee being seated upon the stage, Mr. Brown requested them to select any person, and if that person would give some article.

son, and if that person would give some article to a person in the audience or hide it, he (Br. w.) would find it. Mr. Wm. L Royali being selected, Brown went behind the curtain under guard of two of the committee, while Mr. Riyall watked down the main aisle, then down the side, and handed a pocket knife to Judge Minor, who was on the stage. Mr. Brown was then brought in blindfolded by his guard, the committee of two, and began the attempt to illustrate his supernatural power. Taking Mr. Royall's left hand and placing it to his own forehead, Brown rubbed Royall's forehead for a while, telling him to concentrate his mind upon the thing hid and the place where it had been hidden. Suddenly Brown, still holding Royall's hand to his (Brown's) forehead, came down from the stage, passed rapidly through the aisle, between rows of benches, and back to the stage, where he placed his hand nervously upon the heads of Judge Miner and other committeemen, as he had done with several persons in the audience. Presently be took off the bandage and confessed himself unable to operate with Mr. Royall. The committee then selected another gentleman, Dr. Hereford, a Pennsylvanian, sojourning at the Great astonishment and commotion was caused at this point by a lunatic who arose among the people in the orchestra chairs, and wildly waving his bands, exclaimed, "I controll ed him! I did by the power of the Lord restrain him." [Cries of "Put him out."] Then turning towards the door the fellow screamed. "He (Royal) is set apart to preach the Gospel The power of the Holy Ghost has decended upon him." Here some one cried, "Police!" and the follow disappeared quickly, and the people laughed heartily, partly at Mr. Royall's apparent discomfiture.

St. Claire Hotel.

With him Mr. Brown had no difficulty in carrying out the "test" to success. Next the committee was invited to select a gentleman who should come upon the stage and think of any person in ik audience, and he (Brown) would blindfold himself, and holding the gentleman's hand to his forehead wou dg , to the person. Major James H Dooley was selected, and he having thought of Captain Charles F. Taylor, Mr. Brown led the Major up the aisle, and backward and forward, then between a long row of seats and placed his hand on Captain Taylor's head. This performance was greeted with great applause, when Major Dooley said, "Yes, that is the man I thought of,"

Mr. Brown now called for any person who might be suffering with a pain. He would tell him where it was located. This was rather too personal a matter, and nobody showing any dis position to have their ailments announced to the audience, Dr. Hereford, a very tall gentle mon of fifty, wearing a long beard and gold spectacles, mounted the stage in the midst of great applause, and whispered to the commit tee the location of his pain.

The commotion among the committeemen, sod the long delay, soon indicated that there was som thing wrong. Either the doctor had no paro or it wouldn't do to tell. He turned quickly, ran his fidgers through his scauty hair, and striding towards Brown, poured into his ear something mysterious, then took his hat and left hastily. Mr. Brown said, "Lidies and gentlemen, the doctor requests me to say that owing to the location"-then Brown broke down, and seeing what was coming, joined them in convulsive laughter, but presently added, "owing to the location [laughter] of his pain the doctor asks to be excused." Then came uproarious laughter and a storm of applause. Another person went up, and the medium, blindfolded, and holding the subject's hand to his forehead, felt his head, body and limbs, and located the pain correctly in the right

With Gen. P. T. Moore, Mr. Brown failed to spell out a name which Gen. Moore thought of, but succeeded in the same experiment with Mr. W. R. Trigg. He also performed successful experiments with Mr. Willie Price, Professor Powell, Dr. James Wayte and Mr.

The committee appounced that the experimouts had been fairly conducted, and that they cou'd not pretend to explain them.

To us it appeared that Mr. Brown's feats were evidently due to mesmeric influence over whom he made engagesful as
